

Cooking With Gas

is a real pleasure compared with the work done on the other kind of a stove. The baking is better, the meats are "not ghosts of roasts," but juicy and meaty to the taste. Better biscuits can be made on a gas stove than on any other.

THE CASE OF THE CASTELLANES

BEGINNING OF THE TRIAL FOR DIVORCE—THE COUNT IS MADE OUT A WORTHLESS WRETCH.

PARIS, October 31.—The Castellane divorce case was heard this afternoon before M. Henri Dite, president of the Tribunal of First Instance of the Seine. Neither the Count nor the Countess was present. Maitre Cruppi, for the Countess, pleaded for a divorce on the documentary evidence submitted. The counsel declared that the Countess at the beginning of the suit, was not acting under influence, but solely for the purpose of ending forever the peril of the moral desolation of her household. He explained the marriage contract by which the regime of separation of property was established from the very beginning, and stated that domestic difficulties are over the question of money. Ill treatment soon followed, the Count even striking the plaintiff before the servants.

When he reached the question of infidelity charged against the Count, Maitre Cruppi did not mention names or even initials, designating the co-respondent as "Madame A." "Madame B." and so on. Maitre Cruppi asked that the Countess be given the custody of her three children.

PROOF OF INFIDELITY.

Counsel for the Countess spoke for an hour and a half, and had not finished when the court took recess.

Counsel's presentation of the case of the plaintiff constitutes a complete and pitiful story, a wreck of her married life, due primarily to the Count's inordinate extravagance. Even in spite of their domestic infidelity the Countess was too good to begin an action for divorce until she obtained full proof. She was only 29 when she was married in 1895 and the happiness of the honeymoon was disturbed on their arrival in Paris by the Count's demands for money. The Countess' income was then $700,000 and the Count allowed her $50 pin money. The courtroom was crowded, among those present being many members of the American colony.

COUNT STRUCK COUNTESS.

By 1899 the Countess' interests, Cruppi said, were so heavily compromised by the Count's extravagance that it necessitated a family meeting in New York and the appointment of a legal trustee. But the difficulties regarding money were unceasing and in order to obtain funds the Count pawned or sold at ridiculous prices the most costly objects. When the Countess protested the Count abused her in the presence of servants, and when she declined to attach her signature to documents he pinched her and sometimes struck her, the first time being four months after their marriage.

Cruppi protested against the "malicious reports in regard to the Countess' intentions" and announced that she would leave France for America immediately after a divorce is granted.

LOVE LETTERS TELL OF KISSES.

Recalling the Count's infidelity the first instance cited by counsel was that with a married woman, described as "madame A." in 1898. The correspondence was conducted through Moret, the Count's secretary. The Countess accidentally discovered in the Castellane chateau a packet of love letters and when she protested, the Count struck her. The Countess later placed the letter in the custody of a lawyer.

Cruppi read passionate extracts from one of the letters. It read: "I am kissing you on the neck. Do you feel it?" and so on. Counsel also detailed flusings with "Madame B." and "Madame C." whom the Count met in apartments which he rented in different parts of Paris.

MANY WOMEN OF ALL CLASSES.

After recess Cruppi read from a note book kept by the cook of one of these apartments, giving brutally plain details of what counsel characterized as "an unpardonable offense against the Countess." He also recounted the liaison with "Madame C." whose maid counted guard and signalled from a window when the coast was clear.

But, counsel continued, the Count's love affairs were not confined to ladies of society. They included numerous other women, the reading of whose letters created merriment in court.

Cruppi said that the Count's defense will probably be, that, being young and rich, he could not protect himself against the assaults of love-sick women. In the face of the overwhelming evidence submitted, Cruppi declared, his opponent could not expect the tribunal to ask for the summoning of witnesses.

NO HOPE OF FORGIVENESS.

Counsel added: "Does he imagine by dragging out the case to obtain forgiveness? No, no. Count Boni's plan to reconquer his wife's affections is too transparent."

The final rupture came the day after the first entertainment of King Charles of Portugal, December 1, 1905. The Count at that time insisted that the Countess go with him to a shooting party given by a noble of whom the Countess had cause to complain, and when the Count became enraged at the Countess' refusal, she abruptly announced her intention to separate from him and began legal proceedings.

Counsel placed $5,000,000 as the total of the Count's expenditures preceding the appointment of a trustee. At one time there was a seizure of their property in a suit for the recovery of a debt amounting to $229,600.

Cruppi had not finished his presentation of the case when the hearing was adjourned until next week.

Cure For The Blues

ONE MEDICINE THAT HAS NEVER FAILED
Health Fully Restored and the Joy of Life Regained.

When a cheerful, brave, light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the BLUES, it is a sad picture. It is usually this way: She has been feeling "out of sorts."

Mrs. Rosa Adams

for some time; head has ached and back also; has slept poorly, been quite nervous, and nearly fainted once or twice; head dizzy, and heart beats very fast; then that bearing-down feeling, and during her periods she is exceedingly despondent. Nothing pleases her. Her doctor says: "Cheer up; you have dyspepsia; you will be all right soon."

But she doesn't get "all right," and hope vanishes; then come the brooding, morbid, melancholy, everlasting BLUES.

Don't wait until your sufferings have driven you to despair, with your nerves all shattered and your courage gone, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. See what it did for Mrs. Rosa Adams, of 819 12th Street, Louisville, Ky., niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C.S.A. She writes:

"I cannot tell you with pen and ink what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered with female troubles, extreme lassitude, 'the blues,' nervousness and that all-gone feeling. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it not only cured my female derangement, but it has restored me to perfect health and strength. The buoyancy of my younger days has returned, and I do not suffer any longer with despondency, as I did before. I consider Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a boon to sick and suffering women."

If you have some derangement of the female organism write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice.

SAILORS' THROAT SLASHED.

Water tender J. McClintch of the Nevada was slashed about the throat in front of the Japanese theater on Ala street about 11 o'clock last night and narrowly escaped a fatal cut. Who did the stabbing appears to be a mystery at present as nothing could be learned from the Japanese bystanders and the victim was intoxicated. McClintch was found lying in his blood on the theater steps, the companions with whom he had been drinking having missed him and looked him up. He was taken to the Queen's hospital and treated and then taken aboard ship. It is believed, from some things said afterward by the water tender, that he was too freely expressing his opinion of the Japanese in general.

CONVICTED OF BURGLARY.

Ah Chin was found guilty of burglary by a jury yesterday afternoon in Judge Lindsay's court. Chin put up a poor defence claiming that he had been seized and dragged into a store by some unknown people. The jury was composed of H. W. Doane, W. C. Gilman, S. W. Spencer, J. H. Drew, E. F. Beardsmore, W. K. Wabman, A. C. Dowsett, I. W. Chase, J. W. McDonald, H. C. Carter, Walter Starbird, Charles Spencer. Chin was caught in a Japanese store on Liliha street.
